

Modified Old English lower case basic strokes

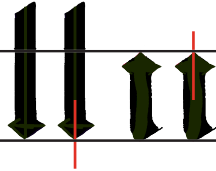

The stem stroke | starts about 1 pen nib from the line and stops about 1 pen nib width from the base line so that the next stroke can be added.

The pen angle for most strokes is a 45° angle

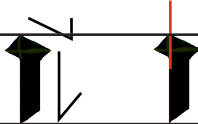

With the pen at a 45° angle, a diamond is formed.

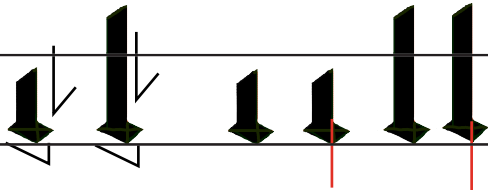

The point of the diamond should be in the center of the stroke for letters like i, j, k, l.

Elongated diamond

The top point of the elongated diamond should be even with the left edge of the letters like n, m, q.

The bottom point of the elongated diamond should be even with the right edge of the letters like d, r, u, v.

The stem strokes start about 1 pen nib from the line and stops about 1 pen nib width from the base line so that the next stroke can be added.

The stem strokes start about 1 pen nib from the line and stops about 1 pen nib width from the base line so that the next stroke can be added.

The crossbar for the t, f, z and F, Z is below the waistline. Turn the pen to a 30° angle to create a thinner line.
